

DISSATISFIED BRASS POUNDERS.

CINCINNATI, May 8.—"I think we are biggest lot of chumps in the country."

"Why so?" the news-gatherer asked, surprised.

Because of this extra work during some time ago we were notified that we could get no more compensation for extra work, but that the salary we had been receiving for our regular work would have covered all the time we put in in addition.

regular hours. This was a pretty serious matter, as we had been earning all day from $35 a month down by working extra time, and to make it worse, the company was not made to apply to all the operators employed by the company, as there is a employed by the company, as those in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington and New Orleans were specially exempted—Heaven only knows why—and were allowed extra compensation for extra work done. Well, last month, you know, the Chicago operators made a request for a return to extra pay rule, and on the list of this month they received word from New York that their request had been granted, and this morning forth they should have their extra pay now here we are hammering away doing hours extra every month and don't get paid for it, and what is more we haven't the nerve to ask for our rights. The Chicago men are no better than we are, and if they get extra pay why shouldn't we? Merri-

Captain Phelan's Would-be Extermination Held Guiltless.
NEW YORK, May 8.—The defence in the case of Dick Short, Walter J. Elliott, a cigar dealer, and J. F. Kearney, a saloon keeper, both of this city, testified before

...both of this city, testified before the grand jury that Phelan had made threats to assault and kill the witness, and that he had been in the witness's office, both before and at the meeting at the witness's office. Other witnesses testified that Phelan was drunk and quarrelsome on the day of the assault, and that he was threat-

g Short when the latter began to struggle with him. After recess, Kearney was called and denied having told Phelan on his way to Rossa's office that Rossa was friendly to him. He admitted having corresponded with Phelan on Irish matters under assumed names.

James. Geo. S. Smith, lately lieutenant capitol police at Washington, contradicted Phelan's statement that Phelan caused removal. He was removed for political reasons, and not till two years after Phelan's death.

Pat Joyce, looking pale, took the stand and testified that knives, pistols, and Japanese dirks were kept lying around Rossa's place. He identified the knife with which short stabbed Phelan as one that was lying Short then took the stand and in a halting and confused statement said that he was first attacked and he did nothing in self defence.

This closed the testimony in the case. J. F. Brooke summed up for Short, as followed by Assistant District Attorney Williams for the people. After a brief impartial charge by Judge Van Brunt, the jury returned to consider their verdict.

Richard Short was acquitted of the attempt to murder Capt. Phelan.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Ex-Senator Hill, who is here, was asked if it was true that he had withdrawn all the charges he had made against Senator Teller, wherein he had

When he was in Denver the legislative investigating committee, made up of six members, called on his personal friends and only one was called. He was not summoned before them. He was asked if he knew of his own personal knowledge of any bribery upon part of Teller. He answered no. He was then asked if had any facts upon the subject that he desired to submit to the committee. To this Mr. Hill most emphatically and emphatically said no. This ended the investigation.

LILLIE MADISON'S FATE

THE BEGINNING OF A TRIAL THAT MAY BECOME HISTORIC.

The Richmond Reservoir Mystery—Will It be Solved?—The Watch Key that May Convict Young Cluverius of the Murder of His Cousin.

RICHMOND, Va., May 8.—It has been a little less than two months since the body of the young governor, Fannie Lillie Madison, was taken out of the Richmond reservoir. The developments since then point to Thomas J. Cluverius, her cousin, as her mur-derer. It has been established that the girl had been betrayed by Cluverius, that she came to Richmond at his wish on March 12 that he was with her during the next day and at 8:30 o'clock in the evening. There is strong circumstantial evidence that he was with her near the reservoir, and that he towards it, at 9:30 o'clock, and at 10 o'clock a woman's screams were heard in the reservoir grounds. Her face was bruised as if from furious blows, and the medical examination showed that she had breathed after sinking below the water of the reservoir.

It has been shown that the girl would have become a mother in two months, and that Cluverius had been paying marked attention to another young girl in King and Queen county. It is believed that Fannie Madison had threatened him with exposure, that he took her to the lonely grounds about the reservoir with the intention of murdering her; that he struck her down and threw her unconscious body into the water. Then the prosecution will claim, he threw her into the river and buried her little relic—thus hoping to destroy all evidence of the young girl's identity. No one but himself knew she was in Richmond. The body found and no one coming to recognize it, it would be buried in the Potter's field. Before the girl's absence would be noted a week at least would elapse, and before the body of the girl could be traced decomposition would have removed all traces of violence. Then there would be nothing to show it was not a self-slay. But the acumen of a newspaper reporter led to the identification of the dead body on the day it was found and to the prompt arrest of Cluverius. His conviction, however, of the actual murder may depend upon a watch-key. It was found within the reservoir grounds and it is said, can be proved to have belonged to Cluverius.

Cluverius is a collateral descendant of President John Tyler; Fannie Madison is a collateral descendant of President James Madison.

And now, within seven weeks of the discovery of the girl's body, Cluverius was arraigned for the murder. Long before the court assembled, both entrances to the building and the passages were lined with men were filled with men and women anxious to gaze upon the face of the man of whom they had heard and to see the man who had been charged with the murder of his cousin.
The prisoner was driven in a hack, accompanied by the police sergeant. The vehicle was quickly surrounded by an excited mob, but the guard was ushered at once into the court room. As he walked in with a firm and elastic tread, his face bore the same calm and placid expression that it has worn ever since his arrest. The prisoner was dressed in a gray suit. He had on a standing collar, black necktie, black Derby hat, and was cleanly shaven.

Judge Atkins took his seat upon the bench.
Judge W. W. Crump, Hon. A. B. Evans and Henry Pollard, counsel for the prisoner, then made their appearance and took seats by his side. Col. W. R. Aylett, of King William county, and Mr. Charles V. Meredith appeared for the state. About twenty-five witnesses for the commonwealth were then called, after which Mr. Evans said that the defense was ready. "Oh witnesses," he said, "are not all in attendance. It may be that as the examination of witnesses for the commonwealth progresses evidence may be disclosed to us which we are not now aware of and have no reason to anticipate. In that event we ask the indulgence of the court to bring such witnesses as the defense may name."

The clerk then told the prisoner to stand up. He arose and scarcely turned his eyes from the clerk while the indictment was read. "To this charge," said the clerk as he finished reading, "are you guilty or not guilty?"

The prisoner in a tone scarcely audible said,
"Not guilty," and took his seat.
The names of the witnesses for the commonwealth were called and Henry S. Kepler was the only competent jurymen found, the others having fixed opinions on the case. Mr. Kepler is a sewing machine clerk. The court then ordered the sergeant to summon a tale of 10 men and took a recess.

During the recess the accused and his counsel were engaged in consultation. Of all the men in the court room none were a calmer exterior than the accused throughout the entire proceedings. Indeed, when the doors were opened to let in the crowd the noise and confusion was so great that the proceedings were interrupted several times, and this, too, although there were a dozen policemen present. Not a feature of the accused changed, even when the murmur of the crowd reached a threatening pitch.
When the crowd left the court room the prisoner faced towards them indifferently.

None of Cluverius' relatives were present except his brother.
The following jurymen were obtained:
Henry C. Adams, a former merchant; Cabell Brakenborough, merchant; W. R. Coleman, collector; William H. Parker, merchant.
Cluverius retained his usual composure, and intently watched the jurymen as they were being questioned by the court. His brother, who is a few years his senior, stood by the chair in which he was sitting, and they frequently engaged in apparently pleasant conversation.

Only witnesses and jurymen were allowed in court, but the crowd hung around the court house till the prisoner was taken back to jail.

Through the Heart.

PORT SMITH, Ark., May 8.—Mitchell Anderson, a Choctaw Indian, seventeen years old, was executed according to the custom of that nation for the murder of another Choctaw boy named W. Winchester last summer.
The condemned youth was seated on a blanket in an open space with a piece of white paper upon his heart. The executioner knelt before him and with one shot killed him.
